Public Policy Coordinator
OBJECTIVES

For this session’s segment, we will:

• Discuss the rational for Public Policy
• Explain the power of grassroots advocacy
• Describe the roles and responsibilities of the Public Policy Coordinator
• Examine some current federal legislation
• Promote how we can stimulate policy change
RATIONAL FOR THE PUBLIC POLICY PANEL

• Public policy and advocacy are core functions of the Academy and are critical to achieving its’ mission, vision and goals.

• Public policy significantly shapes the public image of the Academy.
  • shapes the nutrition and dietetics profession
  • positions registered dietitian nutritionists and nutrition and dietetics technicians, registered, as the food and nutrition experts.

• Advocacy efforts enhance the value of the RDN and NDTR credentials

• It brings nutrition professionals to the forefront of the policy process by supporting enactment of effective legislation and regulations that support the Academy’s priorities.
The power of grassroots advocacy can be extremely effective when dietitians come together.

Example: Improved Medicare and Medicaid coverage for dietetics’ licensure

Advocates use their voices at the local, state and federal levels to make a difference in shaping the future of our profession and America's Health.

As nutrition experts, it is up to us to advocate for our profession.

We must use our collective voice on critical health and nutrition policies.

Share our personal experiences in practice.

So that legislators and regulators are more likely to have the information they need to create and implement sound legislation or regulation that supports our profession and our community.

Racial and Ethnic Health Disparities and Chronic Disease Issue Brief
Introduction

This issue brief was created to educate Academy members about racial and ethnic health disparities in chronic diseases and policy opportunities to address these issues. The brief:

- Highlights the disproportionate impact of chronic diseases on minority populations
- Outlines how the social determinants of health have contributed to health disparities among minority populations
- Provides federal policy recommendations to support diversity in allied health education programs and strengthen our response to racial and ethnic health disparities.

Overview

The most recent U.S. Census reports that approximately 40 percent of the U.S. population belong to a racial or ethnic minority group. Many minority populations in the United States have long faced chronic disease health disparities due to socioeconomic inequities, barriers to education, systemic racism, insufficient access to health care, as well as limited access to healthful and affordable foods and safe places to be active. The historical practice of redlining and subsequent racial segregation across the country that remains today also has impacts on economic stability, educational access, and neighborhood and built environment. These systemic inequities contribute to racial disparities in chronic diseases such as cardiovascular disease, hypertension, diabetes, some cancers and obesity.
